Municipal Biodiversity

Atlas of Malaunay

Malaunay Town Hall,
September 2023

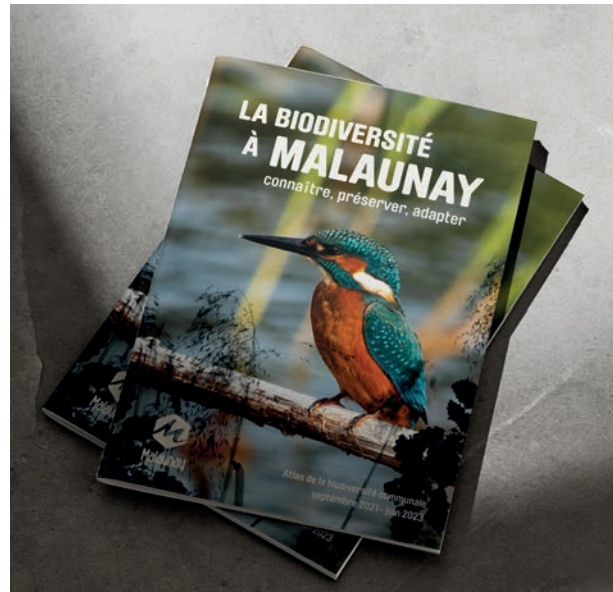

For the City of Malaunay, I designed and produced a 68-page Municipal Biodiversity Atlas dedicated to the natural richness of the local area and the initiatives undertaken to preserve it.

I worked closely with the Town Hall's communications team. Several on-site meetings helped define the scope of the project, discuss the graphic proposals and ensure ongoing project coordination throughout its development.

I created a playful, creative and educational layout designed to encourage readers to discover local biodiversity while making the content accessible to everyone. My work included editorial design, infographic creation, illustration, as well as the processing of photographs and visual resources provided by the Town Hall.

Throughout the publication, photography, illustration and typography work together to guide readers through the discovery of different species. An illustrated map of the area and a series of graphic markers help locate information and identify the different species groups.

I also paid particular attention to the treatment of the images, combining patterns, textures and graphic elements to create visual consistency throughout the publication. The Atlas encourages residents to take a fresh and curious look at their environment and to gain a better understanding of their local natural heritage.

Layout Design for Communication Materials

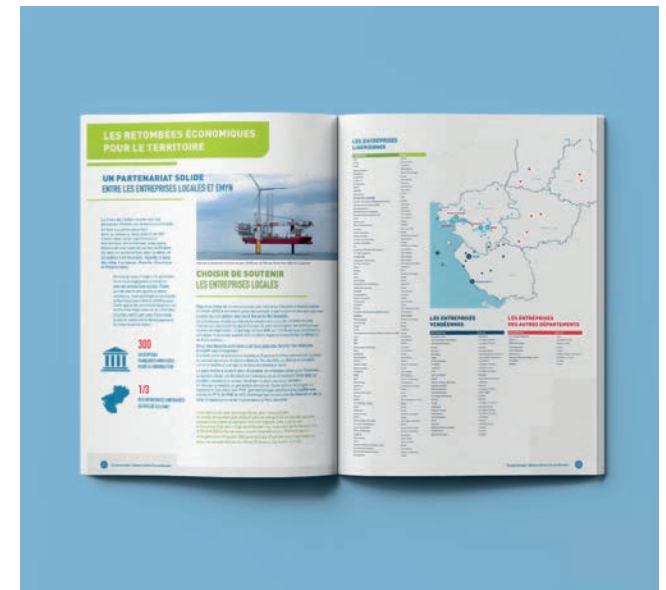

Offshore Wind Farms,
Dieppe-Le Tréport / Îles d'Yeu et Noirmoutiers
June 2025

I work closely with the communications team for the Îles d'Yeu and Noirmoutier Offshore Wind Farm project, as well as with the communications department for the Dieppe–Le Tréport Offshore Wind Farm. These regular exchanges allow me to understand the teams' needs and adapt the communication materials to the information they want to convey.

As part of this work, I have designed and redesigned several publications, while working within the existing brand guidelines. For the Dieppe–Le Tréport project, I notably redesigned the Careers Booklet, a publication of around forty pages presenting the company and its various professions. I also designed the layout of a general information document covering the project, its partners, its local presence and the initiatives carried out across the region.

My work also includes more occasional communication materials, such as flyers, invitations and visuals for digital communication. I prepare these assets for the communications teams, who can then use and share them across their social media channels.

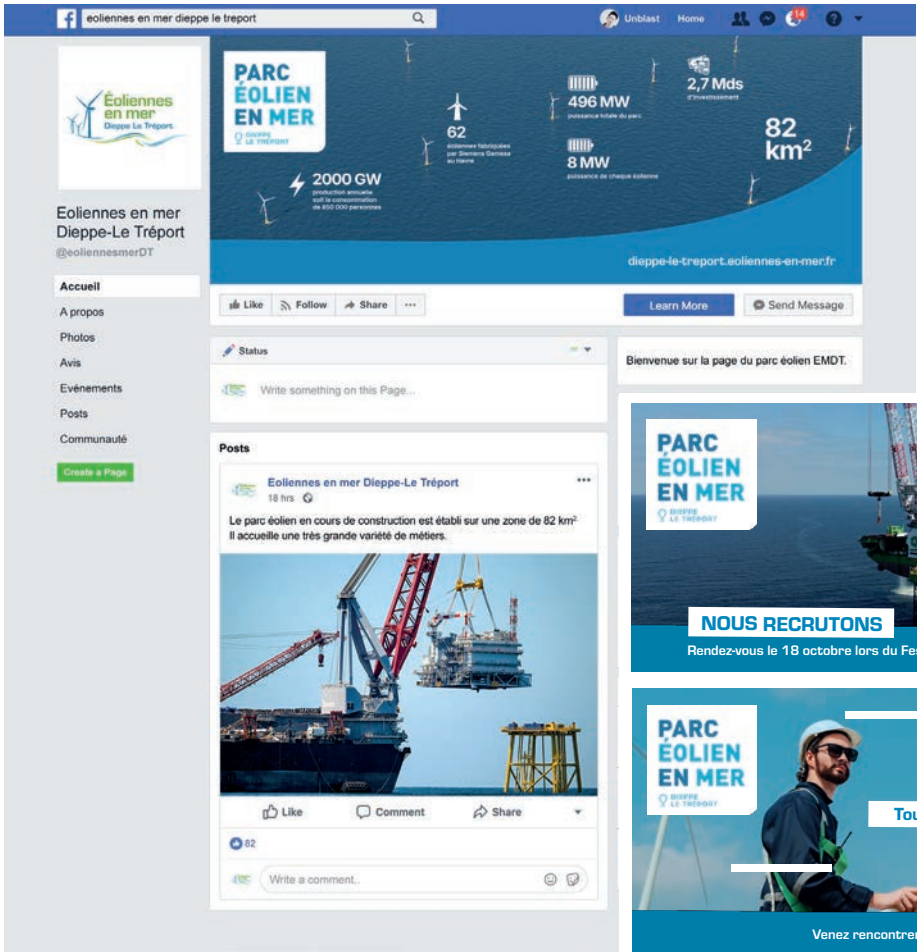

Across all formats, my aim is to make technical content clear and accessible while respecting the identity of each project and ensuring consistency between printed and digital materials.

UIMM Communication and Recruitment Campaign

Rouen

February 2018

For UIMM, I worked on a communication and recruitment campaign launched in 2018, designed to promote training programmes for careers in industry and attract future trainees and apprentices.

I designed and adapted the campaign across a range of formats, including flyers, large-format posters and outdoor advertising displays, particularly MUPI panels. Each format needed to maintain a recognisable visual identity while adapting to its location and to the amount of time viewers would have to engage with it. I also designed presentation materials for the training programmes, with particular attention paid to making the information clear and accessible.

My role also included overseeing production: preparing and checking files, coordinating with suppliers, approving print proofs and supervising the printing process.

I later extended this work to other UIMM communication projects, particularly in 2022, creating materials for digital channels. This collaboration gave me the opportunity to work across the entire campaign process, from graphic design through to its print and digital applications.

Rouen, port(e) des océans

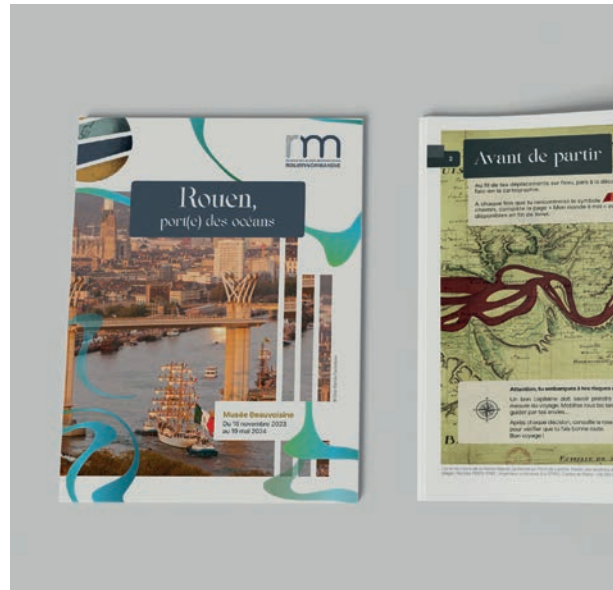

Beauvoisine Museum, Rouen

September 2023

For the exhibition Rouen, Gateway to the Oceans, I worked with the project manager, the collections curator and the director of the Musée Beauvoisine to design and produce a 40-page educational booklet. Our discussions helped define how to tell the story of Rouen, its port and the journeys that have shaped the city.

The booklet was conceived as a genuine gamebook: visitors make choices and create their own path through the content. I designed a layout that supports this unusual reading experience, bringing together maps, artworks, historical documents, illustrations and interactive elements. The aim was to make the content accessible without losing the richness of the stories being told.

I then adapted the booklet's graphic universe to the exhibition's digital communication materials, including web banners and visuals for Instagram and Facebook. I adjusted the compositions for each format to ensure that the project retained a recognisable visual identity, from the printed booklet to social media content.

Gustave Flaubert : La fabrique de l'œuvre

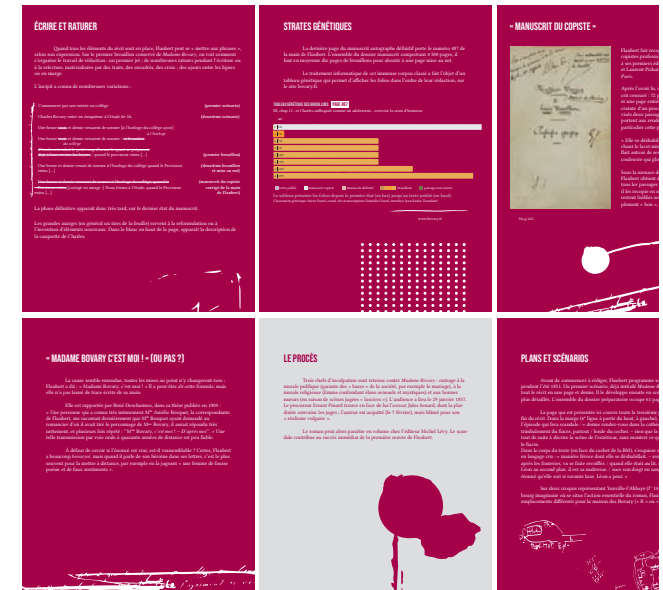

Jacques Villon Heritage Library,
January 2021

To mark the bicentenary of Gustave Flaubert's birth, I created the visual identity for the exhibition Gustave Flaubert: The Making of the Work, presented at the Jacques Villon Heritage Library in Rouen. The exhibition invited visitors to discover the writer's manuscripts and working methods, notably through Madame Bovary, Bouvard and Pécuchet, his study and his circle of friends.

Drawing on this literary material, I developed a visual world combining handwritten texts, illustrations, ink effects and watercolour. I also designed a series of pictograms and reinterpreted Flaubert's toad, which became one of the exhibition's key visual landmarks. A distinct colour was assigned to each section, helping visitors find their way throughout the exhibition.

I adapted this identity across exhibition panels, labels, freestanding displays and wayfinding elements, as well as the poster and invitations. The project also extended to digital communication: I created visuals for social media posts and banners that partner institutions, including the City of Rouen and the library, could incorporate into their email signatures.

I also created a large infographic exploring Flaubert's connections with the writers and prominent figures of his time. The entire project was developed in close collaboration with the library teams, under the scientific direction of Yvan Leclerc, a specialist in Flaubert's work.

Rouen / Ningbo Exhibitions on Gustave Flaubert and the Libraries of Rouen

City of Rouen,
November 2024

As part of the twinning partnership between Rouen and Ningbo, China, I worked on the graphic design of two exhibitions: one dedicated to Gustave Flaubert and the other to the history of Rouen's libraries.

For the exhibition panels, I drew on the visual identity I had previously developed for Gustave Flaubert: The Making of the Work. I reused certain motifs and layout principles, adapting them to the new content. The two exhibitions therefore share a recognisable visual identity while allowing each subject to retain its own character.

I paid particular attention to the hierarchy of information and to the balance between text, images and graphic elements. The aim was to make each exhibition easy to follow while encouraging visitors to pause and engage with the documents and stories on display.

Initially presented in Rouen, the exhibitions were later shown in Ningbo, notably at the Tianyi Library. This project gave me the opportunity to develop an existing visual identity further, adapting it to new narratives and a new exhibition setting.

Exhibitions on Gustave Flaubert and the Libraries of Rouen

Editorial Design and Layout

City of Rouen,
January 2026

Following the exhibitions dedicated to Gustave Flaubert and the heritage of Rouen's libraries, I designed and laid out a 28-page booklet bringing together the content presented on the exhibition panels.

I chose an asymmetrical and dynamic layout to give space to the texts, photographs and heritage documents. This composition creates a varied reading experience from one page to the next, while maintaining a clear hierarchy of information.

I also created an infographic dedicated to the holdings and collections of Rouen's libraries. It makes documentary data easier to understand and offers readers another way to discover the richness of this heritage.

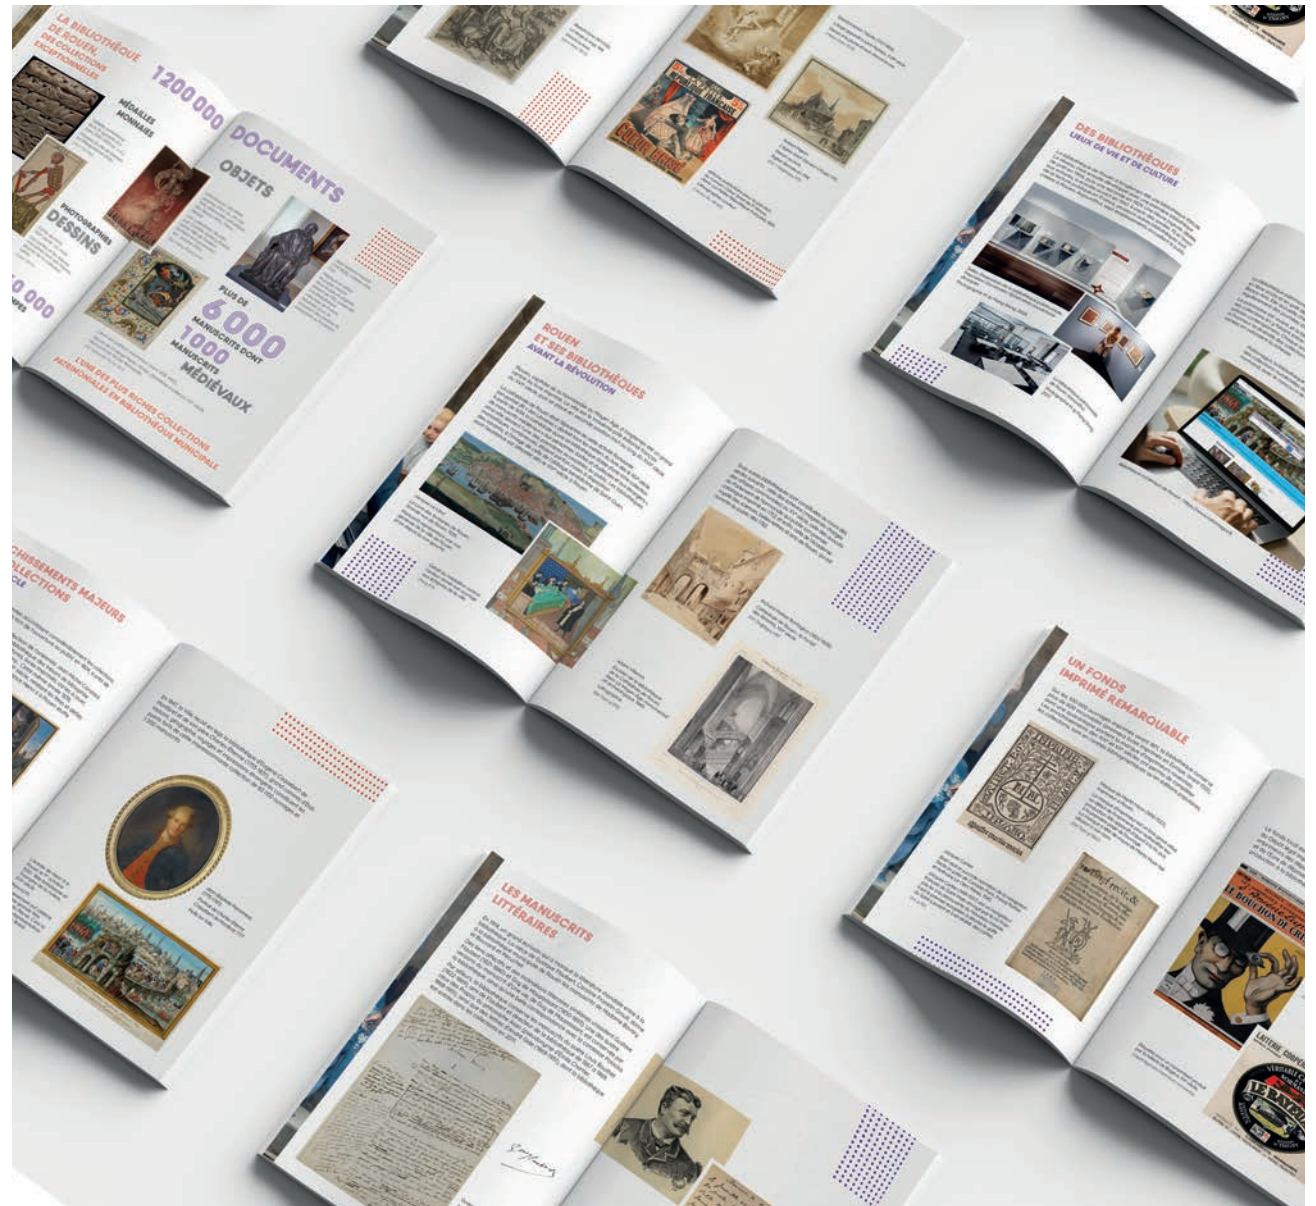

The booklet extends the exhibition experience in a format that readers can explore at their own pace. My aim was to preserve the accuracy and precision of the content while creating an editorial object that is both enjoyable to read and visually engaging.

Visual Identity Redesign

Marseille Opera,
June 2020

For the Marseille Opera's 2021–2022 season, I developed a complete visual identity concept designed to modernise the institution's image while preserving its elegance and distinctive character.

The project was built around a flexible graphic system that could be adapted across the season's wide range of performances and communication materials. I created a coherent visual language for posters, programmes and printed collateral, combining strong typographic principles with a contemporary and refined aesthetic.

For the logo, I reinterpreted the columns of the Opera's façade in a minimalist graphic form. This architectural reference anchors the identity in the building itself while giving it a contemporary expression. I extended this approach through typography and the interplay of positive and negative space, bringing structure and rhythm to the compositions.

Photography plays a central role in the visual identity. Cropping, bold areas of colour and expressive words — dream, feel, love — work together to evoke the emotions of live performance and give each image its own distinctive presence.

I developed the identity across a series of applications, including posters, programmes and stationery, exploring how the graphic system could evolve from one format to another while maintaining a strong and consistent visual language.

2024–25 Season Poster Campaign

Marseille Opera,
June 2023

For the 2024–2025 season, I further developed the visual identity created for the Marseille Opera, designing a new poster campaign that evolved its graphic language while giving greater prominence to the performers and photography.

I built the compositions around a structured grid system, using the season numbers as oversized graphic elements through layering, scale and cropping. The 24–25 figures become a strong part of the visual language while allowing the performers to remain central and expressive within each composition.

Bold colours are combined with evocative words — feel, dream, live, listen — giving each programme its own distinctive identity. Every composition develops its own character while remaining clearly part of a coherent and recognisable visual system.

I developed the campaign across a series of poster designs, exploring how the system could evolve from one production to another while maintaining its key graphic principles and keeping imagery at the heart of the communication.

Digital Rollout of the Seasonal Visual Identity

Marseille Opera,
June 2026

As an extension of the visual identity developed for the Marseille Opera, I created a series of digital adaptations for the 2021 to 2026 seasons. This work explores how the identity could extend beyond posters and evolve across a range of digital formats and screen-based applications.

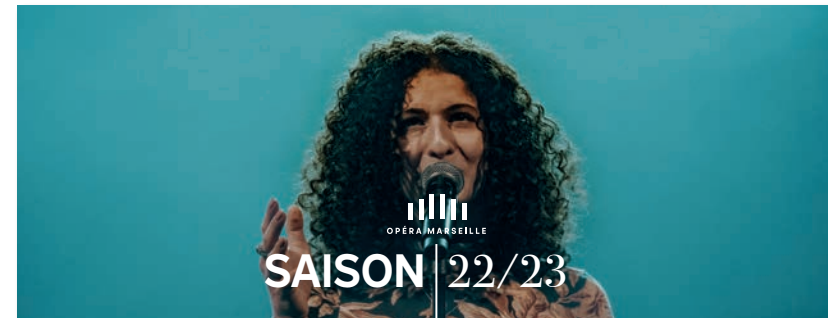

I designed web banners, Instagram and Facebook posts, page layouts and newsletter visuals. For each format, I adjusted the cropping, the placement of typography and the hierarchy of information in order to preserve clarity and readability, including on mobile devices.

Photography and the performers remain at the centre of the compositions. Colours, seasonal markers and typographic elements create a clear link with the poster campaign, while allowing each visual to retain its own expression.

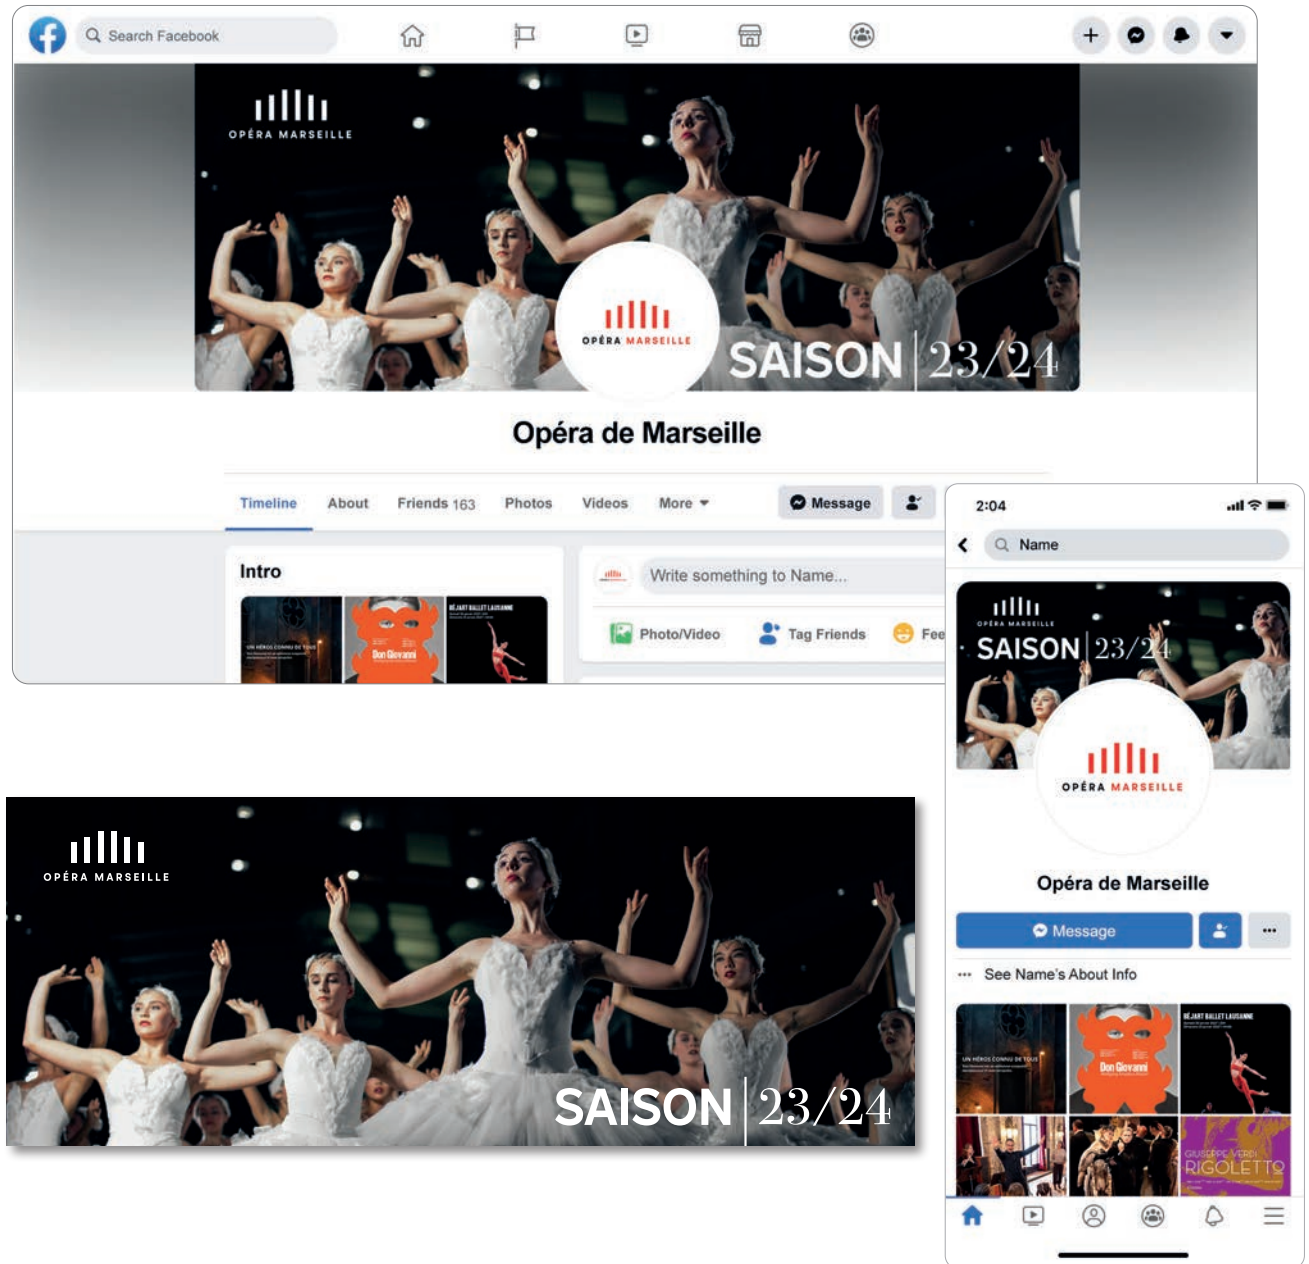

These adaptations show how a single graphic language can respond to a wide variety of digital uses while maintaining consistency from one medium to another, ensuring its coherence d'un support à l'autre.

Heritage and Cultural Interpretation Panels

Malaunay Town Hall,
June 2025

For the City of Malaunay, I designed a trail of 16 interpretation totems installed at various locations throughout the town. Each one highlights a different aspect of Malaunay's heritage, history, biodiversity or transformation, for both local residents and visitors.

I built the layout around a system of hexagonal modules that structure the content and guide the reader. Particular attention was given to typography and information hierarchy to ensure that the panels remain clear and easy to read in public spaces, even when the subjects require more detailed explanations.

For each totem, I created flat-colour illustrations and line drawings, combining them with photographs, visual documents and archival material provided by the Town Hall. This approach helped bring visual consistency to a wide variety of sources while preserving their documentary value.

A distinctive colour palette identifies the different themes and creates a visual thread throughout the trail. My aim was to turn these panels into engaging and accessible discovery tools, encouraging people to stop, explore and learn more about Malaunay.

Émile Zola, photographer

Flaubert Pavilion, Croisset,
May 2026

For the temporary exhibition Émile Zola, Photographer, presented in the gardens of the Flaubert Pavilion in Croisset, I designed the layout of the exhibition panels accompanying visitors through a selection of photographs taken by the writer.

Installed throughout the garden, the panels form a visual trail in which I chose to give full prominence to the images and their history. I also created a pictogram specifically for the exhibition, used as a wayfinding element to guide visitors from one panel to the next.

The project involved extensive work on the photographs. Some came from small-format, limited-quality scans, which I restored and retouched to improve their definition, contrast and detail before reproduction on the exhibition panels.

My aim was to integrate the photographs discreetly into the setting, combining layout design, image treatment and wayfinding while preserving their historical character.

Flaubert Pavillion, Croisset,
May 2026

As an extension of the Émile Zola, Photographer exhibition, I designed a booklet that allows visitors to revisit the images after exploring the garden. I conceived it as an editorial object in its own right, closely connected to the exhibition experience.

For the layout, I drew inspiration from the visual codes of literary publishing, echoing Zola's identity as a writer. I worked with typography, page rhythm and white space to give the photographs the prominence they deserve.

I selected and paired the images to create visual dialogues. From one page to the next, these combinations reveal details and connections that may not be immediately apparent at first glance.

Through this booklet, I wanted to extend the discovery of Zola's photographic vision in a format that readers can explore at their own pace, at the intersection of literature and photography.

Festival du Lin et de la Fibre Artistique

Alliance et Culture, Saint-Pierre-le-Viger
July 2022

For the Alliance et Culture association, I redesigned the visual identity of the Festival du Lin et de la Fibre Artistique. Starting from a blank canvas, I created a graphic language capable of expressing both the festival's artistic dimension and the craftsmanship of the makers taking part.

I developed a refined and contemporary identity inspired by certain codes of fashion, with photography playing a central role. Combined with a clean layout, it highlights materials, creations and people while leaving enough space for information.

I wanted to strike a balance between this contemporary expression and something more tactile and sensitive, connected to craftsmanship and the physical qualities of fibre. This approach guided my choice of imagery, typography and the rhythm of the compositions.

I then adapted the identity across the communication materials for the 2022 edition, including posters, the programme, the festival booklet and other promotional assets. For the booklet, I chose a clear and restrained layout that gives prominence to photography and to the presentation of the craftspeople and their work.

The project also extended to digital communication. I created content for social media, a newsletter template and animated GIFs designed to bring rhythm and movement to online publications. I adapted the visual identity to these formats to maintain consistency between the festival's printed materials and its digital communication.
